Abstract

Anthroponymy in the District of Rab in the Second Half of the XIV Century. The paper provides an overview and an analysis of the anthroponymic structure of the inhabitants of late medieval district of Rab that lived outside the city walls of Rab. These are, therefore, the inhabitants of the rural areas of the island of Rab as well as the inhabitants of the settlements of the northwestern part of the island of Pag that belonged to the district of Rab. Inhabitants are identified by the settlement they lived in, but also according to their name, family and occupation. For better understanding, the text offers a short overview of the current state of research of the medieval anthroponymy.
